DETAILED ACTION

1. The Amendment filed on 4/30/2004 has been entered.

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

2. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on 6/30/04 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.
4. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Art Unit: 3724

5. Claims 14 and 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dunn in view of Klingel (US 4,583,719).

Dunn discloses the invention substantially as claimed (note the last Office Action), except for the first positioning device further including a first approaching motor. However, Klingel teaches a machine for stamping, nibbling, etc. comprising a positioning device (e.g. 34, 44) having a drive motor (11) for positioning the workpiece in the X-direction and further including an approaching motor (7) for the purpose of motorize adjustable clamping of workpieces of various widths (see, e.g., Fig. 1) which clearly teach or suggest ease of computer control in facilitating the clamped feeding of the workpieces. Thus, it would have been obvious to the ordinary artisan at the time of the instant invention to provide the device of Dunn with the further motor as taught and suggested by Klingel in order to facilitate computerized control of clamping feeding of the workpieces of various widths which inherently minimizes any down time caused by manual adjustment of the same.

6. Claims 12 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Dunn in view of Klingel (US 4,583,719) as applied to claims 14 and 16 above, and further in view of Graf et al.

The modified device of Dunn discloses the invention substantially as claimed except for the work piece being a material uncoiled from a coiled material. However, although Dunn, alone or modified, is silent as to the sheet work piece being from coiled material, it is old and well known in the art to utilize the device and method of Dunn for punching sheet material uncoiled from a coiled material as evidenced by Graf et al. Graf et al clearly teaches a punching device and method wherein positioning devices (80, 105) are used to clamp and feed sheet shaped material uncoiled from a coiled material to a punching station (1 - see Fig. 1) for the inherent advantage of machine processing economy, i.e. less down time caused by intermittent feeding of discontinuous work piece sheets, that a longer continuous work piece material affords. Thus, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the device and method of Dunn with the coiled material as taught by Graf et al for the reasons stated supra.

Art Unit: 3724

Alternatively, the coiled material has not been given significant patentable weight, since it has been held that a recitation with respect to the manner in which a claimed apparatus is intended to be employed does not differentiate the claimed apparatus from a prior art apparatus satisfying the claimed structural limitations. Ex parte Masham, 2 USPQ2d 1647 (1987). Moreover, with respect to the apparatus claims, the claimed "coiled material" fails to further limit the structure of the invention to the extent necessary for any significant patentable consideration since the work piece itself does not define any structure. The claims also lack any specific structural detail that is distinctive for the "coiled material." Thus, for all the foregoing reasons, it is not subject to significant patentable weight.

Response to Arguments

7. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 12-14 and 16 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
